Prometheus Biosciences, dba Prometheus Laboratories (“Prometheus”) is providing the person named above (the “User”) the ability to access clinical laboratory testing results and related information (“Test Results”) through the use of an internet web browser. It is the User’s responsibility to maintain the privacy of the protected health information once accessed from Prometheus.

The access to the website is secured by using standard password mechanism and transmission of information between the Prometheus system and the User’s web browser is encrypted. A user name and temporary password are provided to allow initial access to the system. Upon logging on for the first time, the User will be required to provide a password of their choosing. It is the responsibility of the User to maintain the security of this password.

It is Prometheus’s intent to only provide Test Result access to Users that have been identified as the ordering physician for treatment purpose, individuals designated as a recipient of a Test Result by the ordering physician, or designee of the referring laboratory. If the User determines that Test Results accessed by the User are not that of their ordering physician, it is the responsibility of the User to notify Prometheus immediately so that any errors are corrected.

If Prometheus has reason to believe that the security of the User’s access has been compromised, or if the User notifies Prometheus of access compromise, Prometheus will change the User’s password and attempt to notify the User immediately by means of the information provided above.

I accept the terms and conditions set forth above
